MICHAEL JACKSON CANCELS PRESS CONFERENCE MIGRAINE HEADACHES BLAMED

20 minutes after announcing a press conference to retire from slumber parties, Michael Jackson has succumbed to extreme headaches, which will force him to delay his decision.

Jackson, returning from a Swiss courthouse, where he had just finished debriefing a 13-year-old boy, complained of severe headaches, then complained about the over cinnamon taste of Diet Pepsi. A Pepsi spokesperson said that Pepsi has no current plans to drop Jackson's trousers.

A Fruit of the Loom spokesperson who could not be reached for comment said that negotiations are indeed underway to sponsor Jackson's next album, now tentatively titled "Love the Children—Just Not Too Much."

A Schwinn Bicycles spokesperson confirmed that Schwinn bicycles do indeed have spokes.

Jackson has rescheduled the press conference as part of a big slumber party on Saturday night. There will be a limit of 2 donuts and one adolescent boy per attendee, with the exceptions of Oprah Winfrey, who will be allowed 2 dozen donuts, and Pee Wee Herman, who will be allowed 2 dozen boys. Herman will also be asked to provide the white frosting for the donuts.
